

MASTER OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION (MBA)

MBA 500. MBA Foundations. 2.

This class provides an online introduction/refresher to the core professional components of a typical undergraduate business degree and a review of APA citation methodology. It also assesses the base-level knowledge of program students. This course should be completed during or before the student's first full term in the MBA program. With the completion of the course, learners will have demonstrated an undergraduate knowledge of the following topics: Accounting, Business Ethics, Business Finance, Global Dimensions of Business, Information Management Systems, Legal Environment of Business, Marketing, Microeconomics

MBA 510. International Business. 4.

International Business explores the impact of global trade and the global economy on businesses. Students will learn how items such as culture, laws, and policy influence trade. Ethical issues arising from and in international business operations are examined. As international business is business, this course also serves as a graduate-level survey of various business topics. Depending on the instructor's specialty, the course may feature more in-depth coverage of management, marketing, finance, or economics.

MBA 511. Ethical Leadership. 4.

This course explores the evolution and application of leadership concepts. Within this framework, the ethical implications of leader choices are explored. The class will also look at the legal and moral foundations of Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion initiatives. A project requiring the analysis of organizational leadership context(s) is a central element of the course.

MBA 520. Marketing in a Digital Age. 4.

This course investigates the complexities of marketing, both locally and globally, in the twenty-first century. Students will analyze real or realistic situations and develop appropriate marketing strategies. Ethical issues related to traditional and digital strategies are incorporated into the discussion of marketing concepts. Students are assumed to have completed the associated leveling module or have an undergraduate course in marketing.

MBA 530. Corporate Finance. 4.

The most important decision a firm makes is the investment in significant projects. In this course, we will examine this decision along with related topics of time value of money, risk and return, cost of capital, cash flow, financing decisions, and payout policy. We will also explore the ongoing management of the firm and projects using financial statement analysis and financial planning. The course will include a refresher about financial statements and the accounting equation.

MBA 540. Business Economics. 4.

This course provides students with an overview of microeconomic theory emphasizing how these principles influence organizational activities and outcomes. The course will also provide an overview of the statistical tools needed for organizational analysis. Students are assumed to have completed the associated leveling module or have an undergraduate course in economics

MBA 600. Business Strategy. 4.

A firm's success depends on successful strategic analysis, successful strategic decision making and planning, and successful implementation of the strategy. In this course we will examine these processes along with the related ethical and corporate social responsibility concerns. Students will integrate their knowledge from other MBA courses with the concepts in this course.

MBA 605. Business and Ethics. 4.

This is the program's "capstone" course. It guides students through the transition from manager to executive, laying an ethical groundwork to help leaders face organizational challenges. This course emphasizes a leader's most important duty, to establish a culture and climate of an organization that promotes its ethical values and norms.

MBA 671. MBA Capstone Project. 2.

The capstone project is the culminating experience for the MBA program. This course will integrate and apply previous learning to focus on a practical application within an existing operation or organization. Potential projects include a case study analysis, a marketing plan, a strategic plan, a change management plan, a governance plan, a sustainability plan, etc., for an organization. Completion of the course requires a significant written project report and presentation. The project should include global, analytical, quantitative, and ethical components. This course is typically taken concurrently with MBA 605.
